FRENZIED TURKEY FINANCE LANDS YOUTHS IN JAIL
Betal Gobbler, Sell it, Steal It Back and Sell It Twice Again
Two young men were the final chapter of a frenzied Thanksgiving turkey race when they were sent to jail in default of bail by Mayor Anderson in the Gloucester City police court today.

Irving Chase, fourteen years old, and Charles McGee, sixteen, admitted to the Mayor that they had stolen a turkey and sold it, resale it, sold it, bought it back and then resold it once more. They first took the turkey, a jumpy twelve-pounder, alive, from a crate on the motortruck of James R. Doyle, of Berwyn, Pa., at the Gloucester ferry. Then they sold it to John Williams for $2.50. Williams put it in his yard and they stole it back. Then they sold it to George Kleinfelder also for $2.50.

After the Kleinfelder sale they met a man who said that he would give $3 for a bird. They visited Kleinfelder, and told him that it was a stolen turkey and persuaded him to take back his $2.50 and return the turkey. The $3 customer then got the gobbler. The boys entertained the county officials with songs and dances on their way to jail.

ENGLAND FORGETS GIRL-WAR WORKERS

Kate Manicom Says Those Who Helped in Plants Now on Labor Scrap Heap

LEADER IN CITY TONIGHT

"England has lost its appreciation of the services of young women during the war, and the girls of twenty and twenty-one are being thrown out of industrial life onto the labor scrap pile," said Kate Manicom, of London, who represents the working girls of the world and is coming here to make two addresses.

She gave an interview in Washington today before leaving for this city. Miss Manicom has come to this country as a representative of the Women's Trade Union, which has delegates from forty-eight countries, and she delivered a message to Secretary Hughes on disarmament. Tomorrow she will address a meeting of garment workers and later will speak on disarmament at the Friends' Meeting House, 20 South Twelfth street.

"It is hard to conceive," said Miss Manicom, "of a state of things where a girl is done for industrially at the age of twenty or twenty-one, but that is the case with us. Girls who at fourteen went into factory work at the beginning of the war and were kept busy at what we call repetition work—feeding machines—are now twenty and are being thrown on the labor scrap heap, and their young competitors of fifteen and sixteen have preference over them. One reason for this, of course, is that the older girls must have higher wages."

"What to do with these girls of twenty and over is a heart-breaking problem. They are too old to go through another apprenticeship and the work they have done has not prepared them for any other kind of activity. There is little to encourage them to take up some trade, as millinery or dressmaking, for these callings also are overcrowded.

"As a result some tragic things are occurring in England. The girls do not know where to turn.

"Often they have relatives dependent on them, because the men of the family are gone. The Government has offered, in conjunction with the Salvation Army, to pay their expenses to the colonies and provide employment there, but it is not easy for a girl, already broken in spirit, to emigrate. Such an act requires initiative, and it cannot be expected that these girls will possess initiative any more than shell-shocked soldiers could be expected to possess it."

ALLEGED THIEF CAUGHT AFTER CHASE OVER ROOFS
Money Missed Twice After Visits of Electrician to Home
Jacob Steinberg, 2050 Dickinson street, captured last night after a chase over roofs and through alleys, was held in $400 bail for further hearing by Magistrate Dougherty.

Steinberg is accused of stealing a watch and money on two successive occasions from the home of Nathan Poll, 1006 Point Breeze avenue, where he had gone to do electrical work. According to Poll Steinberg was at his home last September and after he had left a watch valued at $145 and about $10 in cash were missed. A few days ago Steinberg appeared at his home again and $25 was missed after his visit.

Poll reported the matter to the police and Patrolman Simonson was sent to Steinberg's house. When he saw the watchman Steinberg jumped from a second-story window on to a shed and then cut through the alley back of the house. He was overtaken at Twenty-first and Dickinson streets.

POLICE DEFEND KILLING

Say Chinese Was Shot After Assaulting Bluecoat

The trial of Patrolman Archangelo Larro and Joseph P. Dundon was resumed this morning before Judge Martin with the attorneys making their arguments to the jury. The patrolmen are charged with manslaughter growing out of the killing of Leo Tong at 555 Race street, January 16, 1920.

It is charged that the officers used undue force and violence. The defense asserts Dundon had arrested a girl when Tong interfered. Larro went to Dundon's assistance, it is claimed, when another Chinese fired at him. Dundon says he returned the fire. The bullet struck and mortally wounded Tong.

HOLD TRUCK DRIVER IN DEATH OF CHILD

Machine Driven by Robert Watts, 1833 North Ninth Street, Killed Schoolboy

After an inquest today into the death of six-year-old Albert Morton, Jr., 1209 Fairmount avenue, Coroner Knight held Robert Watts, 1833 North Ninth street, without bail for the Grand Jury.

The child was fatally injured by an automobile truck driven by Watts two weeks ago. The truck straddled the sidewalk in front of the Hancock Public School, Twelfth street and Fairmount avenue, and struck the boy as he was leaving the schoolyard. He died a few hours afterward in the Hahnemann Hospital.

It was held by Watts that due to the rain-soaked street and faults in the paving, the accident could not have been prevented. Abraham Engler, a teacher of the Hancock School, testified that it is not unusual on wet days for trucks to skid to the sidewalk, and that it has been his custom to stand on the sidewalk when the children leave the schoolyard and to see that they get out of the neighborhood as quickly as possible.

He said that he had complained to the new accident prevention division of the Police Bureau of the condition of Fairmount avenue at this point. He said that the car tracks are of the ancient flat groove variety and that in front of the school there is a slight elevation which often knocks unsuspecting drivers out of their course.

Detective Kamowell, attached to the Twentieth and Buttonwood streets station, confirmed the testimony of the teacher.

Pope and Cardinals Discuss Virtues of Philadelphia Prelate

The virtues of the Venerable John Neumann Neumann, C. SS. R., fourth Bishop of Philadelphia, were discussed yesterday in the presence of the Pope by the Sacred Congregation of Rites, according to a press dispatch received today from Rome.

This is another step toward declaring Bishop Neumann a saint. The lengthy process of canonization was started in 1884.

Bishop Neumann was born in Bohemia in 1811 and ordained a priest in New York in 1836. He was rector of St. Alphonsus Church in Baltimore before being appointed Bishop of Philadelphia.
